

Leon Kazakos QC

“He is nothing short of brilliant and his work ethic is second to none. He can approach any offence from murder to fraud and does so with equal brilliance which never falters.”

Chambers UK 2020

Year of Call: 1999 QC: 2020

020 7353 5324

Prior to taking silk this year Leon Kazakos was shortlisted for Crime Junior of the Year 2019 and ranked Band 1 for Crime as a leading individual by Chambers and Partners.

His practice divides into business crime, general crime, regulatory proceedings, tax appeals and police disciplinary work.

In business crime he is instructed to defend across the spectrum of misconduct; from allegations of high value fraud, corruption and misconduct in public office to cheating the public revenue, money laundering, breaches of FSMA, and other related misconduct.

His general criminal practice encompasses homicide (murder and manslaughter), human trafficking and slavery, serious drugs and firearms offences, and serious sexual offending.

His regulatory work spans firearms licensing, breaches of planning notices, wildlife offences (CITES regulations) and some health and safety work.

He provides advice and advocacy in substantial, sensitive and complex cases usually from a pre-charge stage; representing individuals and companies who are under investigation or being prosecuted for serious wrongdoing. He is an accredited advocacy trainer (Lincoln's Inn), a pupil supervisor and a trained facilitator for advocacy and the vulnerable. Leon lectures and delivers training to solicitors' and accountancy firms in relation to criminal and regulatory matters, with a particular focus on financial misconduct and money laundering.

He is a contributing editor to Butterworths "Fraud Law, Practice and Procedure" and a contributing author in corporate crime to LexisNexis.

Criminal Defence

Ranked as a leader in Crime by both the Legal 500 and Chambers & Partners for a number of years Leon is a highly experienced and committed defence advocate. He has a wide ranging and diverse defence practice with its roots in defending in cases involving serious and organised crime. His current practice has a heavy bias on defending those accused of serious financial misconduct. He is however regularly instructed to appear in cases of homicide and serious violence, rape and other serious sexual offending where specialist witness handling of vulnerable complainants is called for, drug and human trafficking, computer hacking and cases brought under the Modern Slavery Act.

Recent Instructions:

The case was widely reported by the media once reporting restrictions were lifted (see one of the BBC reports here). Leon's client was one of only two who did not receive prison sentences for his role in the overall criminality. Leon is presently instructed to defend in a series of other cases involving allegations of slavery.

R v Various (2010- 2020)

Representing a series of building firms and sole traders accused of being 'rogue traders', in prosecutions brought across England and Wales by a variety of local authorities. These cases require the expert cross examination of surveyors and other construction experts as to the need for the construction work, its quality and market price.

R v F (2018)

Murder: the killing of a French tourist on a London street by a man heavily under the influence of cocaine.

In addition Leon continues to represent police officers accused of a variety of criminal offences, from perverting the course of justice to driving offences to violent crime to attempted poisoning. These are invariably cases where the allegations – regardless of gravity – have very serious consequences for the reputation and careers of those on trial. Leon’s cross-discipline experience in both criminal and regulatory fields allows him to provide specialist advice to police officers under investigation.

Private Prosecution

Graded at Grade 3 by the Crown Prosecution Service and with experience of prosecuting a wide variety of cases Leon Kazakos also advises on the bringing of private prosecutions in cases where the CPS have declined to prosecute.

Recent Instructions:

Re: J

Advice on the bringing of a private prosecution of a then serving cabinet minister for expenses fraud.

Re: G

Advice on the bringing of a private prosecution for a suspected fraud perpetrated by an insurance company against a contracting supplier.

a wide range of regulatory prosecutions. He also represents corporate and private firearm and shotgun licence holders in appeals.

Recent Instructions:

Serious Injury

R v D

This criminal prosecution arose from the very serious injury to and blinding of a man employed by the defendant company to service and repair motor vehicles.

General Health and Safety

R v C

Defending a private individual in a prosecution brought against a caravan site for breaches of the Health and Safety at Work Act arising out of the unsafe storage and maintenance of gas cylinders and appliances.

R v X Ltd

Defence of a company accused of breaches of the Work at Height Regulations.

Endangered Species

R v N (2018) and R v S (2019)

Instructed for the defence in two separate cases where private individuals were charged with breaches of the Control of Trade in Endangered Species Regulations 1997. The defendants had, using various internet forums (Ebay and Instagram) purchased and then sold or offered for sale clothing made from pelts and skins of endangered species. Those species were listed in the annexes to the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES). Both defendants faced further charges brought under the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979 for the fraudulent evasion of the regulation of the trade, and the fraudulent evasion of import and export duty. Non custodial sentences were achieved in both cases.

Planning Enforcement

R v C and P Ltd

Defending both the company and its director in protracted confiscation proceedings arising out of historic breaches of planning notices.

R v P

A prosecution brought by the Environment Agency and the local authority for long term abuse of the regulations and serial breaches of enforcement notices over the operation of an unlicensed waste disposal system on green belt land. The case involved protracted legal argument and confiscation proceedings thereafter.

Environmental

R v E Ltd

A prosecution of a waste management company for serial breaches of the Environmental Permitting Regulations 2010 and for misconduct in insolvency proceedings.

R v X Ltd

Defended both the company and its director for breaches of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 involving the unsafe disposal of asbestos.

Explosives and Firearms

R v A Ltd

The defence of a company with branches nationwide, accused of failing properly to store fireworks for sale.

R v E & B Ltd

Advice to and representation of a firearms manufacturing company in a protracted licensing dispute with the Metropolitan Police.

R v Various

Representation of private individuals in appeals to the Crown Court against the revocation of their shotgun/firearms licences by local police forces.

Professional Discipline

Leon provides advice to and represents police officers and HMRC officers in professional disciplinary matters.

Recent Instructions:

AA v PC K

The officer was accused of discreditable conduct, of a breach of the Data Protection Act and of acting in breach of the standards of confidentiality after sharing information about an arrest with a colleague, information that then reached the victim of the incident.

The Appropriate Authority had argued that dismissal was the only suitable outcome after a contested hearing. Having heard argument the Panel were persuaded – despite characterising the behaviour as gross misconduct – that the officer should receive a final written warning, thus remaining in employment.

MP v Q

The successful defence of a police detective accused of a series of allegations of gross misconduct: including allegations of dishonesty. All allegations of dishonesty were found to be groundless with a large proportion of the case against the accused officer being stayed for abuse of process.

Re: B

Advising an accountant [whose clients include household name celebrities] facing an investigation in respect of both tax advice given and the operation of a tax avoidance scheme.

Re: JS

Advising an officer of HMRC facing disciplinary proceedings brought for suspected evasion/non declaration of Stamp Duty Land Tax arising out of his operation of a business undeclared to his employer.

Tax

An indirect tax evasion specialist Leon advises and represents individuals and companies who wish to appeal the decisions of HMRC to withhold input tax or to assess duty claims. He is also increasingly instructed at an early stage by companies who have become – or are concerned they may become – the subject of HMRC investigations. He appears before the First and Upper Tier Tax Tribunals, usually but not exclusively where dishonesty is alleged by HMRC. He brings his significant experience in defending in the criminal courts in tax and duty fraud to these cases along with a full understanding of the significant body of case law that has developed in the area of Missing Trader Fraud, and the developing position in the DOTAS regime.

Recent Instructions (2019 – 2020):

Leon is presently instructed to advise and represent corporates in a series of appeals to the FTT concerning:

- Value Added Tax disputes (including Missing Trader Fraud)
- The Construction Industry Scheme
- The Alcohol Wholesalers Registration Scheme
- The Disclosure of Tax Avoidance Scheme (DOTAS) Regime
- The Promotion of Tax Avoidance Scheme (POTAS) Regime
- 'Missing Trader' Value Added Tax disputes.
